Become an NDSA Strategic Partner

Join a diverse and nationwide network of organizations devoted to preserving our national digital heritage.

The National Digital Stewardship Alliance (NDSA), an initiative of the National Digital Information Infrastructure and Preservation Program at the Library of Congress, is seeking out Strategic Partners who will help us advance the national dialogue on digital preservation.

Becoming a Strategic Partner

Becoming an NDSA Strategic Partner is a free, simple process with significant benefits. As a Strategic Partner, your organization will contribute to the work of the NDSA by:

- Adopting a resolution acknowledging your support of the NDSA
- Incorporating digital stewardship into strategic planning documents
- Establishing or expanding a committee, interest group, or other community dedicated to digital stewardship
- Encouraging digital stewardship programs and initiatives among your members
- Exploring collaborative research opportunities with the NDSA
- Participating in the NDSA's development of a distributed national digital collection

Benefits of Strategic Partnership

In return for your support, the NDSA will provide your organization with:

- Liaisons to help establish new digital stewardship communities
- An expert speakers bureau for conferences, workshops, and training sessions
- Increased awareness of your organization's important digital stewardship initiatives through profiles and features published in the popular Library of Congress Digital Preservation Newsletter and The Signal Digital Preservation Blog
- NDSA insignia to be used in online and print materials, designating your organization's status as an NDSA Strategic Partner and affiliation with the National Digital Information Infrastructure and Preservation Program at the Library of Congress

Let's tackle the preservation challenges of our digital age together. Take advantage of this opportunity to share ideas, innovation, and information about digital stewardship at a coordinated national level. Become an NDSA Strategic Partner, and join the conversation.
